

DO YOU KNOW ?

The world Greatest cycling race happens every month of July and it is being held across the beautiful cities, towns and villages in France. It consists of 21 stages over the course of 23 days. It was first organized in 1903 and considered the oldest of grand tours and generally considered the most prestigious. Here are reasons why this race happens to be the most prestigious race.

The Greatest champions

Bernard Hinault (five years winner)

Eddy Merckx (five years winner)

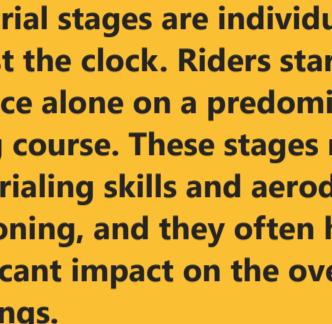

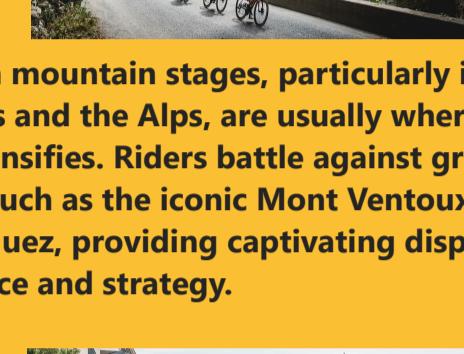

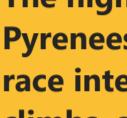

Jacques Anquetil (five years winner)

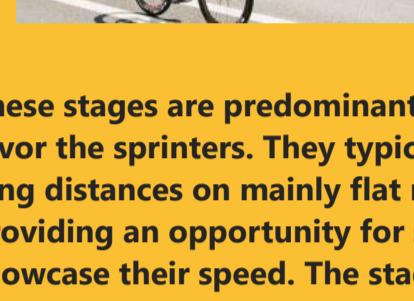

Miquel Indurain (five years winner)

Chris Froome (four years winner)

Most challenging terrain

The high mountain stages, particularly in the Pyrenees and the Alps, are usually where the race intensifies. Riders battle against grueling climbs, such as the iconic Mont Ventoux or Alpe d'Huez, providing captivating displays of endurance and strategy.

These stages are predominantly flat and favor the sprinters. They typically cover long distances on mainly flat roads, providing an opportunity for sprinters to showcase their speed. The stage often concludes with an exciting bunch sprint to the finish line.

Rest Days: The Tour de France also includes rest days, typically after the first week and the second week of racing. These are crucial for the riders to recover and recharge for the challenging stages ahead.

Record breaking performances

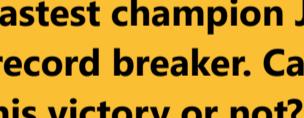

Meet Tadej Pogacar, the "king of mountains". He holds the record for winning the mountain stage for the 5th time. He is a king in different stages as he has won different stages 9 times

Meet Wout Van Aert, he holds the record for winning the individual time-trial stage for the 4th time. He is also a pro in different stages as he has won different stages 9 times

Meet Caleb Ewan, he holds the record for winning the flat stage for the 5th time. We also have Dylan Groenewegen who has won the flat stage 5 times.

Meet Marcel Kittel, he is the first person to win the flat stage 5 times consecutively in one tour (2017).

Meet Jonas Vingegaard, he breaks the record for rider with the lowest total time with 79h 32mins 59 seconds. in 2022. He is currently the fastest rider at an average speed of 41.8 km per hour

2022 Recap

It was an incredible experience, the race started off with 176 riders. But, it ended with 135 riders. It consisted of 21 stages; 6 flat stages, 4 hilly stages, 2 individual time trial, 3 medium-mountain stages and 6 mountain stages. The intensity, sweat, anxiety, energy was all there but as they say only one person will emerge. We have our lastest champion Jonas Vingegaard, the incredible record breaker. Can he maintain his victory or not?

we don't know but watch out for the next season coming
